Rev. E. Meade, the rector of Pohick Church, Fairfax county, presented Bishop Gibson with a gavel on behalf of his rongregation. The bishop replied that when he was using the gavel he would think of such men as George Washington, George Mason and William Fairfax, who were so closely identified with the growth of Pohick Church. He said that he believed in preserving the old associations, for without a good root there could be no progress in the present time. It was moved that a motion of thanks be made Mr. Meade, who is secretary of the council by the council for the gift. The afternoon session was taken up in passing upon the various diocesan canons. The first seven were adopted, but when the eighth was read, which related to the method of raising money for the contingent expenses of the diofor the contingent expenses of the dic cese, several amendments were proposed.

During the discussion on the canons,
Bishop Gibson called Mr. James Caskie

Mr. Joseph Bryan, of Richmond, was opposed to the present assessment of 11 for each communicant, and proposed a pian, which, he said, had worked 'successfully in all the Richmond churches, of assessing each church a certain percentage of the entire money raised by the church for all purposes. Judge Wallace, of Fredericksburg, bitterly opposed changing the canon, and characterized the scheme of Mr. Bryan as contrary to all precedent, and said it was like taxing a man upon his expenses and not upon his income.

Rev. Harry B. Lee, of Charlotte, said that his comgregation had last year raised a large sum of money to pay for their church, and if the proposed amendment had been in effect at that time, his congregation would have had to pay double their assessment that year, thus in effect taxing a church upon the zeal of its members.

The council adjourned at 5:30 o'clock without having deeded the question. Mr. Joseph Bryan, of Richmond, was

The report of the Committee on Church Property was read, and showed that $2.812.50 had been paid on episcopal residences during the year and that two notes for $2.000 each were still due. The report of the Committee on Prayer Books showed that last year the committee started with a balance from the preceding year of $131.22, and laid expended $184.00. The chairman of the committee reported that all but $3 of the money contributed to the fund during the past year had come from the county of Henrico. A rather heated discussion was precipitated by this statement, one of the preachers claiming that his church had contributed $10. The chairman said that
